Heart Attacks Cause Death of New Lenox Pastor

Residents of New Lenox were shocked and grieved to learn of the sudden death of Rev. Ardon W. Otis pastor of the New Lenox Methodist church who passed away Monday in the Silver Cross hospital from coronary thrombosis at the age of 72 years. Rev. Mr. Otis had been suffering from a heart ailment and had suffered an attack Friday and went to the hospital returning home Saturday. Sunday morning he was stricken with two more attacks and died at 1:30 o'clock Monday morning.

Rev. Mr. Otis had served the New Lenox pastorate since June 1943 and during this time had made many friends in the community. Before coming to New Lenox he was pastor of the Methodist church at Manhattan.

Born at Papineau, Ill., May 28, 1873, Rev. Otis was ordained in 1903 after graduation from the Garrett Biblical Institute. He then served the Rock River Conference in the Joliet Dixon district of which he was a member.

Surviving are his wife Elizabeth, and one daughter Margaret of DeKalb, Ill. Funeral services were conducted Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock in the Methodist church in New Lenox. Burial was made the same afternoon in the Fairview cemetery at DeKalb, Ill.

Incorporating Committee of New Lenox Meets

With plans underway for another election next spring, the New Lenox Incorporating Committee elected the following officers: Les Brownlee, chairman; Geo. Koeller, vice chairman; Harvey Frick, secretary, Dean Bright, treasurer.

Through the economical use of membership fees the committee was able to keep expenses within receipts in spite of the demanding election expense. Next year the election expense should not be as great, so it was decided that the membership fee would be reduced from $5 to $1 a year. The lower cost of membership will make it possible for many more people to join. Everyone is invited. Please contact any of the above officers.

The incorporating committee is now working on a program that will carry through until next election. Several sub-committees will be proposed at the next meeting and by having a large group in each one, the work will be spread out so that any one however busy, will be able to participate. The committees will probably be: membership, entertainment, financial, publicity and election. Chairmen for these committees and any others that might be set up will be chosen at the next meeting. When you see any of the above officers about membership, will you also mention the activity which you will be able to help with?

The goal of the New Lenox Incorporating Committee was set forth in the form of a slogan:

Lights In '46

We are sorry that we were not able to arrange to have street lights installed this year, and that the light out in New Lenox must go on for another year. We realize that no other village in the United States this size or larger is without street lights. Once we have them we will never do without them again. Many people will wonder why they put up with dark streets for so long when the money to pay for them was here all the time. $1600 in tavern tax will go out of the village before the next election. This amount will pay the annual street light bill of $900 and provide an additional $700 toward police protection should such protection be decided on by the Townspeople. Lights have an undisputed protective value. We in New Lenox have been fortunate to get by this long without a major incident, the blame for which would rest squarely on the shoulders of the leaders who have avoided or opposed incorporation these many years.

The New Lenox Incorporating Committee recognizes that the public meeting held in school May 3 was too short to permit everyone to get their questions answered regarding incorporation. We want to answer those questions for you. No discussion meetings will be held during the summer months when everyone wants to enjoy the outdoors. But we will be glad to answer your questions thru the News-Bulletin. Just call any of the officers and submit your questions. Here are two that will be answered next week: 1. How will incorporation affect the New Lenox school? 2. Will incorporation require high school students from the village to pay a tuition in the Joliet Township high school?

Frankfort Man Gives Interesting Account of Germany

The following excerpts are taken from a letter written by Pfc. Wm. Breidert who is in Germany, to his mother Mrs. Nannie Breidert of Frankfort.

"We have had wonderful weather for crops, the wheat is three or four feet high and headed out fine. How's corn planting coming at home? I haven't seen any corn here and am wondering if they raise any in Germany. There are quite a few cattle around here and have seen farmers hitch milk cows to pull wagons. The farmers use a lot of buggies yet there are few automobiles and they are operated mostly by those with essential jobs like doctors, burgo-meisters and rationing executives. For funerals they use horse drawn hearses and the people walk in neat order behind the hearse, men wearing their shiny top hats.

"Tonight after supper the Lt. and I went to see the mayor of this town, (it's always up to me to do the German talking) to see what he knew about the burial of three of our fliers who fell and were killed in this area. This happened earlier in the war, and the Germans buried them in the local cemetery. However, he knows nothing of their identity because German officers took care of everything so those men will probably always be listed as missing.

"We are living in houses now. The one I am in belongs to a school teacher and we must keep it neat and clean, and make up the beds like we did in camp. I am now a Platoon runner and carry a sub-machine gun. So far I haven't had to use it and I hope I never have to. Right now we are mostly guarding the towns and farms. The Russian slave workers that the Germans had working for them during the war are, of course, freed. They cause a lot of trouble since they don't have much to eat or clothes to wear, so they plunder the property. The slaves are being gathered as fast as possible by our government and placed in camps until they can be shipped home. Until they are rounded up there will always be some plundering going on.

"I am wearing O. D.s like I wore at home but every once in a while they issue new clothes and meanwhile we wash them or have the German fraus do it for us. We eat at a "Wirtschaft" like a tavern, back home. Of course, the German's don't have any beer to sell so we are using the building for a mess hall.

"Tomorrow I am going to church at Hamm and I want to speak to the Chaplain. Last night we went to a USO show, they took us there in trucks. Remember me to all."

CHRIST LUTH. CHURCH ORLAND PARK SCENE OF PRETTY JUNE WEDDING

The bridesmaids were, Miss Marion Flagg of Midlothian, cousin of the groom; Irene Steinfaft of Tinley Park; Evelyn Rauch of Blue Island, cousin of the bride and Lois Rauch, sister of the bride. They were all dressed in powder blue taffeta floor length gowns and carried pin roses.

Joan Reish, niece of the bride, dressed in pink taffeta and Carol Sterling, cousin of the groom, dressed in blue taffeta, served as flower girls. Little Barbara Sterling, cousin of the groom, in blue taffeta, was ring bearer.

Charles Braasch of Lockport attended the groom.

Bob Batty of Chicago, Milton Schubert of Frankfort, Norman Kramer and Phillip Ebeling, of Orland, served as ushers. They wore street clothes with a white carnation boutonniere.

Mrs. Marion Horn sang, "I Love You Truly", and "O, Promise Me". The pastor of the church, Rev. A. performed the wedding ceremony.

After the ceremony, about 100 guests were served to a wedding dinner in the church schoolhouse, which was beautifully decorated. Mrs. Geo. Estand was responsible for the decorations and along with Mrs. Gustie Hallinan and Mrs. Clarence Kramer prepared the dinner, Ethel Reish, Dorothy Hallinan, Jean Kramer and LaVerne Steinhagen served as waitresses.

The bridal couple received many beautiful gifts.

RURAL HOSPITALS TO GET SURPLUS

WASHINGTON. — Rural hospitals and health centers can look for a major share of the hundreds of millions of dollars of medical equipment to be released by the army and the navy. A policy has finally been worked out at the surplus property board to assure release of this material for public health use, first in areas that have no existing facilities, second in areas which have insufficient facilities. So great is the need of rural and small-town hospitals and clinics that there will be little equipment left for replacement.

This policy was achieved only after a long and bitter dispute between the surplus property board and Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association. Fishbein, in whose journal advertise the largest makers of medical equipment, had urged that this vast volume of surplus material not be released at once.

Instead, he wanted it stored and released gradually in small quantities in order not to upset the market for manufacturers of medical goods. In addition, Fishbein insisted that huge quantities of certain supplies, such as bandages, could not be used because they differed somewhat from accepted standard sizes.

However, in a lengthy session at the office of U. S. Surgeon General Thomas Parran, Dr. Fishbein finally was won over and even agreed to serve on the overall board which will recommend on the disposal of medical supplies.

Three types of equipment will be distributed—public health supplies, surgical and therapeutic instruments, and pharmaceuticals. A board of public officials and physicians headed by Dr. Parran will recommend their allocation to Federal Security Chairman Paul McNutt, who will work through the surplus property board. Actual allocation of the supplies within the states will rest with state boards to be composed of various federal government and state medical officials.

Note — Federal officials are worried lest the state boards become a weak link in the setup. They fear that, in areas of greatest need, state groups will not be anxious to aid in the equipping of Negro clinics and hospitals. Therefore, an effort will be made to work out rigid requirements in Washington. No building program is yet arranged to go along with the disposal of medical supplies, though every effort will be made to convert army buildings into hospitals and clinics.

CHURCHILL'S NEEDLING
Backstage fact about the Joe Davies pilgrimage to London is that originally he was picked to go to Moscow for an intimate talk with Stalin, but his doctor forbade it.

Davies was slated for the Moscow trip because he is the only U. S. ambassador since the United States recognized Russia who has been welcome at the Kremlin. This was primarily due to Joe's book, "Mission to Moscow" and the film by the same name, which gave a sympathetic portrayal of Soviet progress. Therefore, it was planned to have him impress on Stalin that recent diplomatic snarls had alienated American public opinion.

When Davies was unable to go to Moscow, it was decided that Harry Hopkins should do the job instead; while Davies would go to London and urge Churchill to stop needling Russia.

This latter job is considered almost as important as the Hopkins trip to Moscow. For several White House advisers are convinced that Churchill, always critical of the Russians, delights in anything which keeps the United States and the Soviet in a state of mutual suspicion. The British diplomatic game for a hundred years has been to balance two powers off against each other. Therefore U.S.-U.S.S.R. rivalry is right down Churchill's alley.

That is why Joe Davies is empowered to pull no punches in telling Churchill that balance-of-power needling is not appreciated in Washington.

CAPITAL CHAFF
When French statesmen Bonnet and Bidault appeared at the White House, President Truman and staff were so confident the discussion would be friendly that Truman's statement was prepared before the conference. Mimeographed copies, with the ink already dry, were handed out by White House Press Aid Eben Ayres the minute Bonnet and Bidault left.

When New York Congressman Gus Bennett presented President Truman with a special pocket Bible recently, Truman pulled a magnifying glass from his pocket and told Bennett, "You see, I'm all prepared to read this gift, which I'm very happy to receive."

Democratic members of congress were amazed to see Senator Pappy O'Daniel of Texas turn up for the recent testimonial dinner to Ed Pauley and Bob Hannegan. The bitterly anti-Roosevelt and anti-administration O'Daniel led the applause during most speeches.

THE CHURCH BEGINS ITS WORK

LESSON TEXT—Acts 5:29-35, 38-40, 42.
GOLDEN TEXT—Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1:8.

The church of Jesus Christ, glorious in spite of her failings, is the greatest institution known to this world. That is true because while it is in this world, the church is not of the world, but of God. He established the church as the fellowship of believers to do His work in the world. For more than 19 centuries the Christian church has served Him with varying degrees of consecration and usefulness.

The beginning of the work of the church is of special interest, for such a study will show whether we today are following in the right path. We find in our lesson that the early church was distinguished by:

I. Obedience to God (vv. 29-32).
The disciples filled with the Holy Spirit were bold in declaring the gospel and in proclaiming their risen Lord. Realizing that the apostles' message was winning the people, the leaders of the Jews admonished them not to speak in the name of Christ (Acts 4:18). When they continued, the priests threw them into prison, but an angel set them free (Acts 5:19).

When they were again apprehended and accused of disobeying the command of the high priest, Peter and the others responded by pointing out that they were under a higher command, that of God Himself. Him they would obey, come what may.

Who will deny that we need a renewal of that spirit in the church today? We need to lose our fear of men and their little authority, and regain a larger measure of obedience to God.

II. A Convicting Message (v. 33).
When God's Word is preached with complete obedience to Him, something is sure to happen. Men and women will be convicted of their sin. They will be cut to the heart. That conviction will show itself in one of two ways. Some will be repentant and will cry out with the jailer at Philippi, "What must I do to be saved?" (Acts 16:30). Turning to Christ, they will find deliverance from sin.

Others will harden themselves in their wicked ways and become even more bitter in their hatred of Christ and the church. In our lesson we find them taking counsel to kill the disciples. Knowing themselves to be wrong and seeing that God's work revealed their sin, but not being willing to give it up, they tried to destroy the witness against them.

We see that same spirit operative today. To be sure, it does not usually show itself in such crude action as physical killing, although the day when that may happen again may not be far away.

In our cultivated time, it is revealed in a scholarly attack upon God's Word, an undermining of the faith of our young people in schools or colleges, or a ridiculing of those who wish to live a separated, consecrated life.

III. No Compromise (vv. 34, 35, 38-40).
A wise man, Gamaliel, presented what we would now call a program of appeasement. He urged that they wait and see what would happen.

At first glance his idea seems to be most commendable, and of course it did save the lives of the disciples at the moment. But it was essentially a "do-nothing" policy of compromise. If he believed in what the disciples were doing, he should have come out boldly on their side.

Notice that the believers had no part in this scheme. They listened, but did not give assent. They took the beating and went right out and preached the gospel again. What a fine example for us to follow! Those who are alert to the real problems of the church today recognize that the willingness to compromise with the world, the flesh, and (so it seems at times) the devil himself for the sake of peace, is destroying the real ministry of the church.

IV. Absolute Fearlessness (vv. 40, 42).

The early church was a very small group of believers with no position of influence or power in the world. Humanly speaking, it would have been expedient for them to heed the admonition now twice given (compare Acts 4:18) and confine their testimony to a private witness.

But they had hearts which were aflame with the fire of God, a commission to take the good news of God's saving grace to all men, and the assurance of God's presence (see Matt. 28:19, 20, Acts 1:8), and they were absolutely fearless.

The world admires true courage not only on the battlefield, but in the pulpit.

The criticism which men in the armed services make of the church centers at this point, namely, that the church has been too timid about giving out the Word of God, about really believing and practicing it.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Thunderhead

MARY O'HARA
W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: A white colt is born on the Goose Bar ranch in Wyoming. His color indicates that he is a throwback to the Albino, a wild stallion. Otherwise his ancestors are all thoroughbreds. Thunderhead, or the Goblin as he is commonly known, grows from a stubby and ill-formed foal to a sturdy yearling. One day he wanders southward into the mountains. He reaches a river and follows it ever higher. Suddenly an eagle darts at him, ripping his flesh. Goblin fights it off, but is badly frightened and runs home. A week later, however, he returns to the river, and finds a valley, accessible by only one small opening in high cliffs. Goblin's nose tells him that horses live within the valley.

CHAPTER X

Goblin stood motionless, his eyes scanning the valley, his muzzle lifted to suck in and savor and read all the messages it flung at him. He knew much about it already. This was the country that had called him and he had answered the call. Those horses over there, the big, loosely-flung herd, grazing quietly, were the horses he had been hunting.

Mares! His nostrils quivered. He neighed loudly. The mares raised their heads, the foals faced around. What magnificent animals—big, smooth, glossy—the very smell of them was sweet and strong with health and power. The mares were black and bays and sorrels, and the colts were the same, except for a few piebalds.

Nickering, they lifted their heads and trotted toward the newcomer. Goblin rushed happily to meet them. He was at home with mares. Most of his life had been spent with them.

They milled around him, thrilled and excited by the advent of a stranger. He lost all thought of fear or caution in the happiness of having arrived. He met and smelled and talked to them one by one. The squeals and whinnies, the jumps and snorts and playful kickings were all delightful fun. Some of them tried to drive the intruder out, but their bites and kicks were half-hearted.

On the summit of a near-by hill stood a great white stallion.

He was upwind from his mares, which was fortunate for the Goblin. As it was, the Albino noticed the commotion in his harem and lifted his head to observe it.

This animal stood sixteen and a half hands high. He was pure white. His body had power and strength rather than gracefulness. He was not smooth. He was gnarled like an old oak tree. His coat was marred by many scars. His great age showed in the hollows of his flanks and shoulders and face. Behind the dark glare of his eye, a blazing fire burned and on this flame was projected an irresistible will-power, and a personality that was like the core of a hurricane.

He looked over his kingdom. He had stood there for years, looking over his kingdom. And—if horses think—wondering who would take over when his end came. He had no heir. How could he have? He permitted no colt older than a year to remain in the band of mares, nor any stallion older than a two-year-old to be in the valley. Here and there, in the deep grass, were the polished bones of those who had challenged him. And if any attempted to return after he had driven them forth—they did not try a second time.

When Goblin caught the unmistakable strong scent of the stallion he trotted out from the herd to find him. He saw him up there on a hill—just where Banner would have been—and with a joyful nicker, started toward him.

The Albino came down to meet him.

Goblin, a creature of fire and magnetism himself, felt the oncoming stallion in terms of voltage, and it was almost too much to be borne. Goblin came to a stop. It occurred to him that he was going in the wrong direction. But he held his ground.

He watched. He had never seen or felt anything like that before. The stallion was so contained, his power was so gathered and held within him that he was all curves. His great neck was so arched that his chin was drawn in and under, the crest of his head was high and rounded with long ears cocked like spear-points. His face was terrifying—that ferocious expression! Those fiery eyes! And his huge, heavily-muscled legs curving high, flung forward so that the great body floated through the air—then the massive hoofs striking and bounding up from the earth with sledge-hammer blows that made the hills tremble and echoed like thunder in the valley!

The Goblin still held his ground. The Albino slowed his pace, came closer—stopped. Their noses were about two feet apart.

For as long as a minute they faced and eyed each other.

They were the same. Trunk and branch of the same tree. And from that confusing identity—each seeing himself as in a distorted mirror—there flamed terror and fury.

No self-respecting stallion would deign to attack a mere yearling, or even to take him seriously enough to administer heavy punishment. But suddenly the Albino raised his right hoof and gave one terrible pawing stroke accompanied by a short grunting screech of unearthly fury. And in so doing, he both acknowledged and attempted to destroy his heir.

The stroke was delivered with lightning speed. From his great height, if the blow had come down on Goblin's head, as was intended, it would have killed him instantly.

But Goblin was endowed with the same speed, and reflexes that acted quicker than thought. He swerved. The great hoof glanced down his neck, ripping the flesh at the shoulder, and sent him rolling.

To complete the attack, the stallion dropped nose to earth, turned and lashed with hind feet to catch the body of the colt as he fell from the blow and finish him off.

But the Goblin rolled too far and too fast, landed on his feet, and whirled to face his antagonist.

The stallion plunged toward him—head stretched out like a lethal missile, the twisted mouth open and reaching to bite—the great teeth, like slabs of yellow stone—bared—and in the wild and terrible face, two eyes blazing like fire-opals.

The Goblin whirled and streaked toward the band of mares. They were bunched, watching, fascinated. They opened their ranks and let him in.

They scattered at the impact of the Albino's head-on rush. Goblin dodged. He felt the rake of the Albino's teeth down his haunch—a chunk bitten off—he squealed and doubled behind another mare. The Albino's charge knocked her off her feet and Goblin went down under her. He felt a burning pain in his ear and tore it loose. He was up again, shouldering into a group of mares and foals. When he came out the other side, the Albino had lost him for the moment. It was his chance. He fled toward the keyhole in the rampart, Albino in thundering pursuit. Entering the passageway, the Goblin followed the zigzag path which led through it, and here his smaller size gave him an advantage. Emerging on the other side, the Albino was some distance behind, but still coming fast.

It was a long chase. Goblin's youth and his quickness at dodging and doubling—and the cover given to him by the rocks and clumps of trees—saved him. Six miles down the river, he was alone at last, as the afternoon light began to fade. He was limping from the painful wound in his shoulder. He carried his head on one side, favoring the torn ear, now and then giving it a little shake to shake the pain away, scattering drops of blood. He ached all over. To move, now that he had stopped running, was an agony. He stood under a tree, twisted and quivering. He ate nothing all night.

The memory of all that had happened was graven in him. He faced the rampart, cocked his one good ear, turned his head until he caught the wind, and stood straining, listening, smelling, bringing to his consciousness—almost as strongly as if he could see him—the terrible monster that had terrified and bested him. He had the impulse to neigh and challenge him—but not the strength nor the courage. Never mind—there would be another day. Wait. He had wounds to heal.

Goblin grazed until he had filled his belly and renewed his strength, then took the way home.

Fortitude was demanded of Ken next day when Flicka went unexpectedly into labor and Rob said she was going to have a bad time and they would need the vet.

Driving over to the telegraph station with his mother, Ken's face was white and furious. "God made the world, didn't He?" he asked suddenly. "Well, I don't think much of the way He made it. I could have done it better. I can think up awful nice worlds."

Nell glanced down at him. What could she say? Goblin—now Flicka—

it was a pretty big dose of trouble for him.

"Why do all the horrible things have to happen?" he asked passionately.

She must answer him. "We can't understand entirely, Ken—"

"Why not?"

"You can't understand something that's so much bigger than you are. Not wholly understand. You can't even wholly understand your father or me—only one side of us. And even less, your Heavenly Father, the Father of all of us. It would be as if a small circle, like a nut, could get outside a big circle, like an orange."

Ken was silent, composing an important prayer. "Please God, make me have fortitude. And don't let me lose my grip. But if you could manage it to have the Goblin come back, and Flicka get through this foaling all right, that would be just keen. For Jesus Christ's sake, Amen."

There was a flash of radiance on his face as he looked up at his mother.

Arrived at the railroad station, Nell entered the telegraph office, and Ken stood listening to the mysterious dots and dashes which asked the telegraph agent at Laramie if he would be so kind as to do Captain McLaughlin of the Goose Bar ranch a favor, and telephone the veterinarian, Dr. Hicks, and find out if he could start to the ranch immediately to deliver a foal?

Within five minutes the message came back that Dr. Hicks would come.

On the Goose Bar ranch the weather was hot—really hot—for only two or three weeks in midsummer. On this day the thermometer stood at a hundred and one with a burning, dry heat which lay on the land in shimmering waves, reminding that it was not far removed from the desert.

Inside the barn, in spite of wide open doors and windows, everyone was soaked with perspiration and Dr. Hicks had constantly to turn aside and shake the water from his forehead. Rob and the boys were naked from the waist up.

Flicka, exhausted by hours of unavailing labor, lay on her side. It was a dry birth. For a long time before the veterinarian's arrival one of the foal's forelegs had been protruding.

"Which means," said Dr. Hicks when he arrived, "that the other leg is curled back and makes birth impossible. The foal is in the wrong position, it will have to be straightened out." He asked for a gunny sack, cut holes in the corners for his arms and one in the middle for his head, removed shirt and undershirt, donned the gunny sack, greased his arm and went to work.

Ken watched him, vowing to himself that never again should Flicka be allowed to have another foal.

The doctor puffed as, holding the tiny yellow foreleg, he slowly forced it back into the mare. Ken saw it vanish with a strange sensation. Could the foal still be alive after being handled like that? At length the doctor's hand and wrist disappeared too, and Ken, watching his heavy brown face with its humorous expression, as if at any moment he was going to crack a joke, tried to read on it just what was going on inside there. Lucky, thought he, that Doc was so big and husky. To be able to straighten out a foal inside of its mother took strength!

While Doc worked he talked in short grunts. "This mare'll never foal again—that infection she had when she was a yearling injured her—scar tissue—it's a wonder she's as good as she is. All right for saddle—ah, there, I've got it now—"

"Got what?" breathed Ken.

"The other hoof. Both of them. This isn't going to be so bad, after all."

Nell was kneeling at Flicka's head, sponging her face and mouth with cold water. Now and then the mare gave a spasmodic heave.

Presently Doc was pulling on something. Flicka groaned and labored mightily. Ken groaned and strained too, but Howard watched every move the doctor made, keenly interested. Two tiny hoofs and a muzzle appeared and the doctor got to his feet and mopped the sweat from his face.

"She may be able to manage the rest herself now I've got it in the right position," he said.

But Flicka couldn't. Most of her strength was gone and it seemed that something still impeded the delivery.

McLaughlin looked at his watch. "It's been going on three hours now." He and Doc talked together in low voices. It frightened Ken to hear them—so casual and fatalistic. Ken touched the protruding hoofs. They were not hard yet and were covered with rubber-like pads. He tried to pull on them and was dumbfounded to find that it was like trying to pull a bough from a tree.

McLaughlin sent Gus for ropes. They tied a rope to the foal's legs and Doc and his assistant put all their weight on it. The foal moved a little, the head was nearly out. Then it stuck, and when they continued to pull the only result was that Flicka's whole body slid across the floor. They tied her forelegs to a post and pulled again. Flicka's body stretched out straight and taught, ropes at each end of her, but the foal did not budge.

Your 1945 Garden Compost Needed To Insure Good Vegetable Growth

SEVERAL hardy vegetables will withstand frosts and even freezes and thus may become a part of the fall garden. Plantings of these vegetables in August, September and October and in some sections of the country, even later, may be made and still harvest a crop. They include beets, collards, kale, lettuce, mustard, spinach and turnips.

In these months too, it is time to look forward to next year's garden. It is a good time to start that compost pile and have it ready for the spring planting. It is a good time to spade up that portion of your garden for the very early plantings next year. It is time to sow a cover crop for the winter which is a very good practice. These cover crops may include clover, rye, wheat or some other such crop, but it is advisable to consult your local county agent or agricultural college to determine the most profitable winter cover in your own locality.

Have you proper storage facilities for your surplus root crops such as potatoes, beets, carrots, parsnips? If not, now is the time to get busy. If you do not have a proper basement in your home, that is one that remains cool enough to properly store the vegetables, consult your county agent about this too. He will be able to advise you how to store these vegetables economically so that they will remain in good condition throughout the winter.

These fall months too will give you time to burn diseased residue of your crops for it is not a good thing to let them lie about the place and be overlooked in the spring.

The successful gardener, after his harvest, can also take stock of his experience during the season to determine what vegetables he will not plant next year.

Too much stress cannot be placed upon the importance of that compost pile, particularly in the towns and cities where organic matter is not readily available to improve the soil and workability of the garden plot. In the fall when leaves and dried lawn clippings and other dry grasses are readily at hand, it does not require too much work to throw these materials into a flat pile, alternate with layers of dirt. The dirt layers should be two to three inches thick with the grass and leaves or other vegetation approximately twice that thick. Generous handfuls of commercial fertilizer should be thrown over the vegetation to aid in its proper decomposition.

The gardener will find that next spring his compost will enable him to garden more successfully and easier and that it will be well worth the added labor.

Winter Care of Tools Important

Now is the time also to see that tools are properly put away, that they are free from soil. The spade and hoe can be sharpened ready to use when spring spading time comes. If there is any indication that fertilizer or insecticides or fungicides will be scarce, the fall and winter months are good times to lay in a supply, for there is little or no demand for them now and they may be readily available. Put them away for use when you need them.

So the home garden program is to be a continuing program. Right now it is a patriotic effort to help raise the food on the home front so that most of the commercial vegetable raisers' produce can go to the boys on the battle fronts. But after the war, home gardening will be continued. The experience being gained under the stress of war contingencies will serve the country well in the postwar period also.

Compost is a decayed mixture of soil and organic matter, such as manure and any available plant remains—leaves, lawn clippings, weeds, and crop residues. The soil absorbs the products of decomposition of the organic matter, prevents their loss, helps to give a more desirable texture or consistency to the decayed mass.

Compost varies greatly in its composition and physical condition, depending upon the nature of the soil and other materials of which it is made and upon the degree of decomposition.

The following letter has just been received by Paul Maciukenas from a shipmate of his:

Dear Paul:

I received a letter from you yesterday. I'm glad to hear that you haven't forgotten us out here. With that smile you have, so many of us miss that old expression of yours, "Wonder what Sanger Hall is doing tonight?" As you know most of us come from a small town and we sure enjoyed reading the Tinley Park Times as it made us feel as if we were at home.

Just to turn a page and see where someone had a pig for sale or a horse to sell to a fox farm or to read an ad "a tractor for sale". Well that paper doesn't come here anymore and that smile isn't with us. So I'll say lets get this war over with and if I and the rest of the boys in the fireroom do anything back in the states it will be to drop in and say hello to you and your family and the guy that runs the Tinley Park Times.

So for this time Ill say be good and think of us once in a while. We remain your friends always.

D. B. Guerrero F1-c

Thanks to the Tinley Park Times and the Veterans of Foreign Wars. After returning to civilian life, on the advice of the VFW and some of my friends, I was recommended to the Mutual Life Insurance Co. for a position. After passing an aptitude test with very high honors the experts of the Company are devoting their time and experience to see that I make good and be of help to my Community.

Thanks also to the good work of the WBA and to Mrs. Willman a member in good standing for the good work that they are doing. The VFW and the Red Cross, to the Left Handed Social Club and to Dinis Hunting club and Mr. Wesley Stemm the mayor who have been raising funds and doing everything they can to make entertainment for the boys over there. And to the ones who buy "Bonds" and make our Victory possible. Last to say, the Bonds that furnish transportation to the boys who are coming home to stay. Now in closing I'll say as a civilian and try to do my part as a citizen.

Paul Maciukenas

The Auxiliary held their business meeting June 8 with 13 members present. The meeting was opened in the usual manner. Americanism chairman reported that May 15 Girl State would be cancelled by the Government because of transportation.

The Past Pres. meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Hagadorn on June 19. Sick cards were sent to several of our members who were ill. Poppy Chairman Mrs. Burleson thanked the members who helped in selling poppies especially those who took the day off to sell and make the day a success.

Our next meeting has been changed to Thursday, June 21 because of the Homecoming. Election of officers was held. There being no further business the meeting was adjourned.

Off the Runway

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-3
by 2nd Lt. Erlayne Conel

As promised in last week's column here is the story of Squadron 613-3's Flight Mission to confer with Major Gordon DaCosta, and to welcome him as the new Illinois State Wing Commander of Civil Air Patrol.

Flight Mission, Sunday June 3rd, 1945. Change of destination: At Major DaCosta's request we met him at Champaign, Ill. not at Springfield, as originally planned.

Participants—11 planes taking off from Prosperi, Rubinkam and Howell airports. Lead plane piloted by 2nd Lt. Fred Schrum, with Capt. Neil Kingston, Commander of Squadron 613-3 as Navigator-Observer. Other pilots and observers: Lt. Ted Farrington, Lt. Walter Wolak, 2nd Lt's. Ray Robinson, John Morton, Elmo Brennom, John VanVorst, Geo. Stevenson, W-O Elaine Smith, Pts. Pamela Cavoto, Howard Shippe, Helen Budwash, Emery Nadler, Richard Wasney, C. Rozell and this writer.

11:55. I took off from Howell airport in a Cub Cruiser piloted by Lt. Wolak, who flew the 103 mile trip in an hour and seventeen minutes, making good a ground speed of eighty-five miles an hour. Navigation details: True course 197 degrees, wind eleven miles per hour from N. W. compass course 201 degrees.

Take off "sticky". Heavy rain had made the runway muddy. Cruise slow.

12:12 On course. Icing developed in carburetor which forced us down from 900 feet to about 600 feet, but application of carburetor heat by the pilot, Lt. Wolak, overcame this condition and we quickly regained altitude. All during the rest of the trip icing threatened to make a forced landing necessary but this didn't worry us however, for a small plane such as a Cub, can be set down with safety in almost any farmer's field, a big yard, or a roadway.

12:30. On Course. Still bothered with icing. Sighted the Fairchild PT 19 from Rubinkam Airport, piloted by W-O Elaine Smith with Lt. Elmo Brennom, Navigator.

13:00. On Course. Our flight path took us near enough Chanute Field to give us an excellent view of this beautiful airport. I was amazed at its hugeness as well as its beauty, but was surprised at the lack of activity there. On the trip coming back however, the giant that is Chanute had sprung to life. Fighter planes, medium and light bombers were in action and in abundance, giving an over-all picture of great power and plenty of punch!

13:12. Champaign Airport! Our Cub fourth plane in—with a So Smooth landing by Pilot Lt. Wolak.

13:30. The meeting with Major DaCosta was held in the lounge of the Champaign Airport Flight Office which was warm, and equipped with plenty of comfortable chairs. The Major's enthusiasm was infectious, as he told of the Government's bigger than ever plans for Civil Air Patrol. Plans which include an enlarged

Cadet Training program, A million dollars worth of radio equipment. Possibly more planes and Link Trainers to each Wing. All to aid us in fulfilling our job of training America's youth. Arrangements are now being made for approximately 800 Cadets and Senior members to encamp at Chanute Field this summer. Girl Cadets and Women members will encamp at Scott field, in the WAC barracks. Dates for these encampments will be announced later. Also a State wide maneuver is being planned for this Fall that will be by far the largest maneuver ever to be held by the Illinois Wing. Several thousand members, and at least one thousand planes will take part in the events.

15:00. Meeting over, and under low hanging clouds, we all headed for home base. Due to a strong headwind our return trip was slow, but uneventful. We had no further trouble with icing, (carburetor) but did consider setting down near some farmer's house in order to get something to eat. Champaign's Airport is without restaurant facilities so, we had had no food since early morning and I, for one was extremely hungry!

Arriving at Howell Airport at 16:50 o'clock, Lt. Wolak again made one of his beautiful landings, and the trip was over.

Scheduled for July—date will be announced later: Mike Burson, famous parachute jumper, who thrilled us all with his delayed jump at our recent Recruiting Drive Air show, will make a Night jump from approximately 3000 feet at Rubinkam airport.

Letters received from two former Cadets are much appreciated. Chas. M. Robertson S2-c, Little Creek, Va. and Pvt. Ray Gebauer, Sheppard Field, Texas informs me they will welcome news and letters from the Squadron. And I will appreciate the address of Stanley Leland, a former Cadet, who is in the Navy, if someone will be good enough to send it to me.

Airport Activity: Five Civil Air Patrol planes from the Squadron at Kokomo, Ind. stopped enroute to Eagle River, Wis. on Saturday.

Richard Wasney, dual X country, Harry Dittleman, solo X country, Harry Schaffrath, first solo Cub 66. W-O Elaine Smith, John Suchon and Irvin Snider, solos in Fairchild PT 19, Armand Surprenant, Private License.

That's all for now.

Christian Science On World Peace

Lasting world peace has its roots in the permanency of divine laws and cannot be expected to rise from the foundations of selfish desires and aims, the Christian Science Board of Directors told the annual meeting of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston June 4.

Commending the efforts of the California peace conference to evolve a practical basis upon which nations might outlaw war for all time, the Directors pointed out that these efforts would be successful insofar as they reflect the operation of God's government in human affairs.

The Directors' message featured the fourth annual gathering of Christian Scientists to be held under the restrictions of wartime travel. The audience reflected the desire of the Directors that Mother Church members living beyond the 50 mile area of Boston should abide by the requests of the Office of Defense Transportation and remain at home this year.

Highlighting the meeting was the election of Mrs. Myrtle Holm Smith of Waban, Mass., as President of The Mother Church for the ensuing year, succeeding Paul Stark Seeley, and the re-election of Roy Garrett Watson, Treasurer and Mary G. Ewing, Clerk.

Christian Scientists heartily concur in the purpose of peace conference representatives in Cal. to find ways and means to prevent war, the Directors stated. They saw these efforts as making practical the Sermon on the Mount.

"The manifestation of God's law can never fail to quiet the turbulent waters, but we must assiduously strive to rule out of our thoughts any qualities which would work against, rather than for the peace of the individual, and therefore of the world. In this way, the Directors indicated that world peace stems from the individual overcoming of human faults.

"In order to keep one's spiritual understanding clear there must be deep consecration in thought and deed to the government of divine Principle. There can be no lasting peace where selfishness reigns. Therefore, it is by those who base their thoughts upon God's laws that the present global problems can be solved and a lasting peace attained."

The Directors stated that membership in The Mother Church was now four times greater than it was 35 years ago. There is a growing awareness, they said, of the need for unselfish service to God and His law. Without frankness and honesty in the world, they added, "we have a whirlpool in which there is no steadiness and no rest."

In tribute to the courageous struggle of Great Britain against the rising tide of Nazism, at and after the time when she stood alone in her armed resistance, and to those who held on in other lands, the Directors stated: "Their consecrated prayers and unceasing efforts have been rewarded with a glorious victory."

The Directors also paid tribute to the faithful chaplains and wartime ministers who are "bringing comfort healing and spiritual strength" to thousands of men and women in the armed forces.

Stating that the greatest catastrophe to overtake the human race was the loss of the true import of Jesus' life and teaching, the incoming President attributed that loss to Jesus' followers reverting to their old way of thinking and living or "trying to graft the new onto the old."

She cautioned against the human race losing its spiritual gains of more recent years for the same reasons.

The assurance of the defeat of godless evil seeking world domination has made 1945 one of the most outstanding in human history, the retiring president said. While a great deal has been accomplished, he said there was plenty still to be done. He impressed upon his audience, however, that the assured way of accomplishment lies within the heaven of spiritual truth implanted in human consciousness by Christ Jesus nineteen centuries ago.

"Let us rise," he said, "to the opportunities before us. Let us be eager to help solve the political, racial and economic problems confronting the human race. Let us not fear change, but confidently expect change. Let us resolve to express more of the limitless range of thought natural to man."

That the religious rights of individuals are beginning to be recognized by those outside Christian Science was revealed by the Committee on Publication which pointed out that recently in California Christian Scientists were exempted voluntarily from proposed health insurance legislation sponsored by Governor Earl Warren and the CIO.

Radio activities of The Mother Church have been extended, the committee reported, as the result of a weekly program launched over 148 stations, consisting of electrical transcriptions recorded from the auditorium of the church. These are broadcast throughout the United States and in Canada, Hawaii and the Canal Zone.

Demands for Christian Science literature continue to increase, according to the Trustees Under the Will of Mary Baker Eddy. Mrs. Eddy's writings, for instance, were figured to have risen in sale 23 percent from 1941 to 1942, 57 percent in 1943, and 78 percent in 1944. The total sales for last year were said to be more than twice those of the last full pre-war year, 1940.

The Trustees of The Christian Science Publishing Society reported the most active year in the Society's history, measured in terms of circulation, advertising, and total business volume. The Christian Science Monitor, and other publications of the Society, all reached new highs in circulation, they said. The Monitor's Paris branch has been reopened and overseas activities "will be resumed as rapidly as we are privileged to do so."

More than 1,000,000 lines of new advertising were added to the Monitor's columns, with both the number of advertisers and lineage attaining new high volumes, it was stated. The Trustees indicated that many important developments were in store for the Monitor in the postwar era, and to this end orders have been placed for new presses and other printing equipment of the finest quality.

A special Children's Day service was held last Sunday in the church by the Sunday School members. Eight children were graduated from the primary class and each graduate was presented with a bible.

PRESIDENT HARRY S. TRUMAN BRIDGE

Provides ...

... a NEW Time-Saving ROUTE

ROCK ISLAND engineers, constantly studying ways to improve the service, suggested a new route through Kansas City. This necessitated bridging the Missouri River at a new point.

The new route and the President Harry S. Truman Bridge, now in operation, eliminate the "turning" of through passenger trains, saving much valuable time for the traveling public, speeding ROCK ISLAND'S service to and through Kansas City, the "Heart of America."

The route will provide a new faster freight line through the city, separate from the passenger line.

This important improvement is but one of many that ROCK ISLAND has made. Other bridges have been built; Centralized Traffic Control has become a reality; lines have been straightened and grades reduced; modern Diesel and steam locomotives put into service—all to the end that ROCK ISLAND shall furnish finest transportation. All were steps in this railroad's famed Program of Planned Progress. Important in winning the war, assuredly—but equally important when America resumes its normal peacetime growth and prosperity.

As yesterday—and today—so tomorrow ROCK ISLAND'S sole purpose is to provide the finest in transportation.

The Church In Germany Today

What is happening to religion in Germany? To the men and women now laboring earnestly toward a solution of the social and economic problems involved in the regeneration of conquered and prostrate Germany, the fate of the religion of the German people is a matter of cardinal concern.

In the maelstrom of contending forces and interests, the shifting currents of influence, the hidden animosities and smoldering hates that rip Germany today, the church and all it stands for might well go down to oblivion. For 12 years it has had to fight for its life against a government that sought to destroy its very roots.

This question is underlined in a Religious News Agency dispatch from Geneva this week, reporting a proposal by Bishop Theophilus Wurm of Wurttemberg for a reorganization of the German Evangelical church on the basis of a complete separation of the church and the state.

Since the Evangelical church—the national church of Germany—includes both Lutheran and reformed elements and comprises a membership of 40,282,289, Bishop Wurm's opinions carry tremendous weight. He stated that the church's free status "will not imply that we will resign from the duty of serving our country", but that "we will have our hands free of state control."

The German clergy, it is said, feel that after 1939 they were helpless to alter the course of events because of the overpowering strength of Nazi propaganda.

One of the most powerful, but apparently the most controversial, figure to emerge in post war Germany is the Rev. Martin Niemöller. Prior to 1933, he was an enthusiastic supporter of the Nazi regime. When war began, he volunteered for service in the German navy. Three of his sons were in German military service. He now states, according to a dispatch from Overseas News Agency, that most Germans are "honest, obedient, hard working and peaceful."

Furthermore, he recommends that the non-fraternization order, now strongly enforced in Germany, be rescinded. If the Americans, says

Rev. Niemöller, don't win the Germans, the Russians will, thus allowing Communism a direct inroad.

Rev. Niemöller has spent nearly 8 years in Nazi concentration camps, four of them in solitary confinement.

"I was never in politics," he told Landrum Bolling of Overseas News Agency, soon after his liberation a month ago. "I never belonged to any party, but upon religious grounds I had to resist that kind of government which laid claim to the body and soul of the individual. After the Nazis revealed their methods, I became convinced you couldn't possibly become a good Christian and a good Nazi. Hitler demanded possession of the complete individual."

Following the appearance in a church paper of an article condemning anti-Semitism, Hitler ordered his arrest.

World leaders in the field of religion anxiously watch developments in Germany. Equally concerned are political and economic specialists, realizing full well that the religious convictions and guidance of a people bear heavily on the direction their participation in world affairs will take.

INTENSIFY FIGHT AGAINST INFLATION

By Wm. E. Kaiser

Recently leading economists in the United States were polled by "Anti Inflation Bulletin" publication of the Institute of Life Insurance. These economists agreed that the danger of a serious inflation has increased during the last year and made the following suggestions: The economists suggest: By the Government aim for a balanced budget; cut spending, hasten reconversion, reduce reliance on the banks for financing expenditures. By the individuals: continued saving until volume production of peacetime goods is attained. By Business speed reconversion.

The members of the Community Service Panel of your Local War Price and Rationing Board should like to add these suggestions: By the Government: Limit exports to goods needed to win the war; clamp down and punish the Black Marketeers, postpone all but vitally needed and essential public works. By Individuals: Avoid Black Markets, refuse to pay more than ceiling prices, buy only that which is essential, pay ration points in full. By Business, hold prices down, be content with reasonable profit, increase efficiency, demand ration points in full, Stick to the OPA rules.

We urge all to follow these suggestions in the fight against Inflation.

Babson's Report: When Will Japan Surrender

Babson's Forecast on Germany was Correct.

Babson Park, Mass. June 8. May I start by calling attention to the definite statements made in my Annual Forecast of December 28, 1944 in which I said:

"The greater part of Germany's army will collapse before the German planting season opens in the Spring of 1945.

"Japan will not hold out so long as most people think. Japan will collapse within six or twelve months after Germany collapses.

"If Stalin's health continues, he will be the world's most powerful man in 1945 and may dictate the peace terms, especially for the Pacific."

LOOKING AT THE RECORD

I am especially proud of the above forecast in view of the conditions under which it was written. Readers will remember that last summer the public was very hopeful and looked for the collapse of Germany at any time; but I said there would be no collapse in 1944. Then the Germans started their famous bulge in the middle of December and Washington was very much disturbed. In fact, a study of newspaper clippings will show that I was almost the only columnist who was optimistic at the close of last year. But I knew the German temperament.

I have been in Japan since Germany declared war upon us and still have an agent in Shanghai. I, further, have always been interested in American missions in both Japan and China. I, however, am basing my present forecast upon something else which might seem very unimportant to many readers. I refer to the fact that my personal house servant is Japanese, born near Tokyo. He has lived with us day and night for twenty years and was preceded by a cousin who was with us for seven years. Hence, I know the Japanese temperament.

It is true that certain Japanese who descended from a famous old Prince have the "hara kiri" religion. These few will commit suicide rather than surrender. They now serve as human bombs. They, however, make up but a small portion of the Japanese people who, as a whole, are human like ourselves actuated by the same motives. A Japanese soldier will live on very little food. This he can carry on his back. They are tough physical specimens. Hence, it costs the Japanese only 20% to support their army of what it costs us to support the American Army. But what of this? Japan has less than 20% of our resources.

Japanese soldiers will fearlessly obey orders and follow a blue print; but when something which they have not planned for happens, they are lost. As a nation, they are wonderful copyists, but they lack originality. They had every movement of this war planned and charted before Pearl Harbor. Everything went according to plan in connection with Thailand, Indo-China, Burma, the Dutch East Indies and the Philippines. Then something happened to their blueprint.

During the past year their plans have been of no use and they have suffered accordingly. In my own household, I can give a wonderful banquet for twenty people if I give my Jap a week to prepare it, but if I bring home one person to dinner for whom he has not planned, he is completely upset. They prosper on success; but cannot stand failure. Hence, I feel certain that their collapse will be only a question of months.

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN?

All the above means that the global war will be over before most people expect it. It will be over before all the boys in Europe have a chance to get to the Pacific. Except in special departments, the casualties will be light. Most of the boys may be home before Christmas.

The above means that re-conversion will steadily continue throughout the year and some time during next year we will be going full-blast on consumer production. A few excellent years of business with higher stock prices should follow. Furthermore, if we play fair with Russia, Joseph Stalin should be one of our best friends so long as he lives. Upon his death, it is very possible that Russia will be split up or suffer civil revolution. Then she surely need not be a menace to the British Empire, to China or to ourselves.

A SURPRISING number of letters have come to this desk asking about the deal wherein Mort Cooper of the Cardinals was traded to the Boston Braves.

Our only answer to these queries is that baseball is strictly a business. For example the Cooper brothers,

Mort Cooper

St. Louis gives its ball clubs. In the way of attendance, St. Louis is only a fair baseball city. It was none too hot last season with two pennant winners. The attendance figures prove all this. It isn't a matter of argument.

So when a pitcher such as Mort Cooper comes along and happens to be St. Louis property, he is out of luck. Affiliated with another club he might get almost double the price St. Louis can pay him.

Mort Cooper, however, used bad judgment in the way he handled his side of the argument. He should never have left Billy Southworth stranded, without any warning. For Southworth is a square shooter, who is for his men.

Not Very Smart

One of the main tangles in baseball is that few club owners are smart, and most ball players are in the same fix. There is more than a little smartness on the field in baseball, but not much smartness off the field. This includes the players and the owners.

Ball players like to win. And yet many good ones have to go to sure second division or tail end teams, where they get less money and are usually overlooked. They get all the worst of it. But if all the good ball players went to New York, Detroit, Brooklyn and the better paying cities, there would be no big leagues as the setup exists today.

There should be a new distribution of baseball cities. There are certain towns that can't handle two big league teams. St. Louis is one. Maybe Boston is another. Certainly such cities as Los Angeles and Baltimore could do a far better job in the way of supporting crowds. Detroit could handle two big league clubs, but the American League wants no National League competition. It is all badly muddled.

Those Early Days

A few days ago we ran into an old pal, who at the age of 86, is still as spry as two Mexican jumping beans. He is the sole survivor of the old St. Louis Browns who won four pennants in a row in 1885 to '88.

Arlie Latham, as an umpire, was something on the order of Tim Hurst and Silk O'Loughlin.

I asked Arlie a few days ago who was the best ball player he worked with in those earlier days.

"He was a kid named Ty Cobb, playing with Augusta," Arlie said. "He was always crowding the plate, so I couldn't see it. He was always ready to fight with everybody for his rights, including the umpires and the other ball players. He was only 17 or 18 years old. But he could do everything — hit, run, field and win ball games. He'd lay down a bunt and beat it out. He'd steal two bases. Then he'd hit a triple — and try to steal home. To most of us umpires, he was a pest. We didn't have enough eyes to follow him. That was the best minor league team I ever saw — Ty Cobb, Eddie Cicotte, Nap Rucker, Ducky Holmes — and a few more. And none of them brought over $750. Cobb was one of the cheaper sales — to Detroit."

This reminded me of the older days in the South when I was called on, as a young sportswriter in Nashville, to recommend a few southern leaguers. My four selections at that time were Joe Jackson, with New Orleans, Jake Daubert with Nashville, Tris Speaker with Little Rock and Nap Rucker with Augusta.

The Brooklyn club refused to pay $5,000 for Joe Jackson, the greatest natural hitter that ever lived.

The Cleveland club sent for Jake Daubert — and turned him back because he couldn't hit. He only led the National League in hitting in 1913 and 1914, with Brooklyn — one of the best hitters the National League has ever known. And Cleveland needed a first baseman badly. But Daubert couldn't hit.

'Crude,' but Great

Ab Powell said Nap Rucker was too crude. That's what they said about Rube Waddell, Shufflin' Phil Douglass, Dizzy Dean, Bugs Raymond and Grover Cleveland Alexander. A trifle crude — I'll admit. But I'd like to own a ball club with those five pitchers. So would you, if you knew anything about baseball.

Most of these were not heroic characters. But when they stepped into the box, a majority of the big hitters of their day wanted to throw their bats away.

Reduce Size of Cobs By Increasing Grain

Proper Fertilization Produces Better Corn

How corn growers can avoid "shortchanging" themselves on grain yields by reducing the amount of cobs per bushel through soil improvement practices was described by H. J. Snider of the Illinois college of agriculture.

Professor Snider cited tests at the college's experimental field near Ewing, Ill., to show that the proportion of grain to cobs is increased when corn is grown on fertilized land. Since cobs have little or no feed value and are so low in plant nutrients that they have virtually no use in manure, the advantages of soil improvement are obvious.

At the Ewing field, U. S. Hybrid No. 13 was grown on land treated with limestone, phosphorus and potash and in which nitrogen-fixing legumes had been plowed under, Snider reported. The same hybrid was planted on untreated land and at harvest the results were compared. The corn grown on fertilized land contained 10.5 pounds of cobs per bushel of ear corn weighing 70 pounds. The hybrid grown on untreated land contained 14 pounds per bushel.

"This means that each 100 bushels of corn grown on unfertilized land contained 350 pounds more cobs than 100 bushels of the same hybrid grown on treated land," Snider said.

"On this basis, a farmer who does not treat, shortchanges himself by 5 bushels of grain in each 100 bushels of corn produced. Moreover, when he buys ear corn grown on this type of land, he is subject to the same shortchanging process. The extra poundage of cobs must be handled out of the field into and out of the crib and into the feeders."

Grow Sugar Beets

The above is a direct appeal from the officials appointed by the Commander-in-Chief of our country calling on the farmers of America to grow the sugar that this nation so vitally needs.

To Convert Fuel Oil From Farm Crop Waste

While there has been talk and experimentation for several years about obtaining several by-products from corn stalks and other farm waste, the United States department of agriculture now comes out with a full-fledged program for extracting liquid motor fuel from corn cobs, peanut shells, flax shives, oat hulls, cottonseed hulls and burs and sugar-cane bagasse and other farm waste.

The department says that experimental laboratory investigations by their chemists indicate that from 90 to 95 gallons of liquid motor fuel can be obtained from a ton of corn cobs or cottonseed hulls and that about half of this is in the form of ethyl alcohol.

Experimentations have advanced to the semi-works stage at the D. of A. northern regional research laboratory at Peoria, Ill., and results are so promising that the work is to be enlarged so that it now may be evaluated on a semi-commercial scale.

Campaign Saved Lives

Thousands of human lives have been saved as a result of the nation's campaign against cattle tuberculosis, according to figures released by the American Veterinary Medical association.

Since 1930, human deaths from non-pulmonary tuberculosis in this country have decreased 54 per cent. In 1921, condemnations of swine at packing plants because of tuberculosis averaged .17 per cent, it has now been reduced to .02 per cent.

Tales of the Town

Producer John "Memphis Bound" Wildberg was fuming about an indolent girl usher at one of the Broadway show-shops.

"Take it easy," his Missus admonished. "For all we know, this girl may be the next Lauren Bacall."

"By the time she seats us," grunted Wildberg, "she'll be too old."

Red Kann relays the one about radio announcer Ken Roberts, who told of a commentator that rounded out a broadcast by declaring: "Adolf Hitler — that swine—that pig!" . . . Roberts had to follow saying: "The commentator's views were his own and do not represent the viewpoint of his sponsor, the Universal Meat Packing Co."

Some of the boys were discussing how Goering should be punished. They all agreed the Allies should be particularly severe with him because of his failure to keep any of his numerous promises. One of the fellows summed up: "If for nothing else, Goering should be punished because he broke every promise he ever made." . . . A little refugee, who was listening, interrupted, "I don't know what you men are talking about," he said. "Goering kept all of his promises to the Jews!"

He's a hotel executive, and they've been married for six years. Last week she celebrated her 27th birthday, and as was the custom in the past he sent roses — one rose for each year. The clerk who filled the order, however, thought that the flowers in stock were rather small and so for the same price tossed in 6 more—making a total of 33. . . . When he got home that night and expected some remark about the flowers, he was embraced—by the vase and all.

Mr. Georges Jomier forwards the following: "We just came back from two weeks in Germany and you have no idea how happy we were to leave that country. Berlin has been a great disappointment — a lot of activity but no warmth or color or spirit."

"We travelled in a car from Berlin to Frankfurt, and we have seen with our own eyes that one should not believe in the complaints of distress by the Germans. The factory chimneys are smoking and the people are working everywhere. The crops are very good — everyone seems to be very well-fed and well-dressed."

"And what is difficult to understand is that the Germans do not believe that the Allies have won the war."

"Of course, their money has no value or very little value, but the bankers are blaming the Allies for that state of affairs and are pretending that it is the fault of the Allies. Therefore, they are trying by every means possible to stop France from accomplishing her program of reparation."

"Thus, Germany remains a menace, and France should fear a new war." — From Le Courier Du Pacifique, July 4, 1921.

Lew Parker understands some correspondents were interviewing the unit that captured Hermann Goering.

"How'd you find him?" they asked.

"Just pushed back his medals," was the answer, "and there he was."

Recently on a newly won island the all-clear signal blew after a Jap raid—but none of the boys left their fox-holes. . . . The siren blew again, and nothing happened. . . . Finally, in a last desperate move to get the men out of their fox-holes, the officers played a phonograph record over the PA system. . . . A few moments later the soldiers streamed from their shelters. . . . The selection was the Frank Sinatra recording of "Come out, come out, wherever you are."

T. E. Brown, now stationed at Groton, is an unassuming lad. . . . At the battle of Midway he left a flying formation that had destroyed a Jap battleship. . . . Then he "alone'd it" for another target and slipped a big egg right into the funnel of a Jap destroyer — sending it to the hari-kari trail. . . . Lt. Brown rejoined his group on the way home—and after two days (and threatened discipline by his CO) he admitted that he knocked off the Jap destroyer. . . . He was afraid, he said, of being yelled at "for breaking the formation!"

Nightlifters, unable to sleep, who spend the wee hours visiting the Central Park zoo. "You probably meet a better class of animals!" . . . Penny-ante book-ing agents transacting "business" on the sidewalk. This is one of the most tragic aspects of the show business, which is dedicated to making others happy. . . . The penny arcades that have coined fatter profits and lasted longer than most expensive night clubs.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Rubber contracts and ripples into an unstretched state in much the same way as an earthworm moves across the surface of the ground.

From April 1, 1942, to August 31, 1944, the total amount of natural rubber imported into the United States was 214,148 long tons. India and Africa supplied 35.3%; 31.9% came from Latin America, and 15.3% from Liberia. The remaining 17.5% came from shipments in transit when sources were lost to Japan.

Buses now carry more than half the total number of persons transported by intercity public carriers in the United States.
